Sir,

I begin to complain about TV corner popups while programs with closed caption run because as time goes by, those popups is getting bigger and bigger. Popups show up on viewing screen is about 25% or 30% now since first time were about %10. Sometimes watching some programs, animated popups did inference my viewing pretty bad because I tried to see the program and caption texts same time but popups were in it, too. I thought we, deaf people, got the rights first before those damn popups. I wondered why you FCC people forget about our rights? My suggestion is that FCC people should enforce those popups move from regular program's time slots to junk ads' time slots only. So, we can be more comfortable watch the programs with captions.

Dave
